

WEEK OF MUSIC AT BIG GARDEN FOR WAGE EARNERS

Russian Symphony Arranges Great Festival, to Begin With a Wagner Night.

An unprecedented music treat for the school children and their parents, and particularly the wage-earners of New York, will begin at Madison Square Garden Sunday, June 23, and continue eight days.

This educational movement has the aid of the Board of Education, the Board of Examiners and Dr. Edward Stitt, Superintendent of Recreation Centres, and is the entering wedge of an elaborate scheme of educating the people in music at prices within reach of all.

Active in promoting music at popular prices for the people is Julius Hopp, director of the Theatre Centre for Schools, and a committee of prominent men and women, who have lent their support to previous movements for the popularization of music among the masses.

Great opportunity to study work of masters. To enable school children to have access to the educational advantages and uplifting influence of music and to extend the popularity of music in the community is one of the highest aims an educator may strive for.

It has long been the ambition of our educators here to devise some scheme by which the school children, their parents and the wage-earning masses might enjoy the music afforded in the high-priced opera at prices within their reach.
